PLAYER SCENARIOS TO WIN THE PGA TOUR PLAYOFFS FOR THE FEDEXCUP

The following table shows scenarios for how each player in the field at THE TOUR Championship can win the PGA TOUR Playoffs for the FedExCup. For example, the first table below shows how the No. 1 seed Matt Kuchar can win the FedExCup. If Kuchar wins THE TOUR Championship he is guaranteed to win the FedExCup. If he finishes second, he can still win the FedExCup if Johnson, Hoffman, Stricker and Slocum finish 3rd or worse. Other notes:

Ties at THE TOUR Championship: The place positions are based points awarded for solo finishes. Though additional scenarios exist for tie places where points are split between positions, this provides a general framework for where players need to finish to determine the winner of the FedExCup

Ties for the FedExCup: Positions in asterisked in red represent player finish combinations where that would result in a tie for the FedExCup at the conclusion of THE TOUR Championship. For example, if Kuchar finishes 3rd at THE TOUR Championship, Hoffman 2nd and Els wins, each of these players would have the same number of FedExCup points (3,500). In the case of such a tie, the winner will be decided in a sudden-death playoff immediately following completion of THE TOUR Championship.
